What happens at the Berkeley Psychic Institute?

from the Graduation Address given by Rev. Katie Keim on her graduation from the Missionary Teachers Program of the Church of Divine Man

Good morning — Would you all take a deep breath and relax back into your seats, this might take a while as I'm starting to acquire one of the traits of being a teacher, running of the mouth.

When John Fulton first told me I was to be Valedictorian I immediately started going through my mental file of experiences since I've joined the Church. I think I've now written at least 10 speeches in my head and done at least that many on the astral. Well, I finally got it down on paper last night.

When I first heard of the Church of Divine Man, it was from my roommates of that time. One of them had been asked to leave the Institute by Rt. Rev. Michael Tamura about six years previous and she was trying to get back and have a reading with V. Rt. Rev. Lewis Bostwick, but she kept getting Rt. Rev. Susan Bostwick on the phone, who told her she would have to write a letter to the Board of Directors. Well, this got me going. I couldn't imagine a group of people being as bad as my roommate made them out to be. So I decided then that I was going to get to know these people. I headed out soon after and started my first Meditation class, soon forgetting my original goal of meeting these terrible people. The class was wonderful; it was what I'd been looking for since I was 16. I was hooked, I'd found home. By the time I'd finished my second Meditation class, I knew I wanted to teach it and so I set out on my path to become a spiritual teacher. First the Clairvoyant Program, the Ministers-in-Training and Spiritual Counseling and then what I thought was the final step, the Missionary Teachers' Program. About eight weeks into the program I began to wonder if I'd ever get to teach, when all of a sudden my new assignment was to teach Meditation. ME! As the teacher, not the assistant, but the teacher, front and center. I could barely stand the excitement. I spent the whole day before my first class in a cold sweat.

Teaching has turned out to be more exciting than I had anticipated. The amusing part is that this Friday night I realized I've really only just started. I want to share this story with you of what happened Friday evening that made me realize this. I was at the Berkeley Psychic Institute of Pleasanton making phone calls to people who had either had a reading or workshop and inviting them in for classes. I came to this one card that had two names on it, a phone number and a date. All the other cards I'd been working with had all that but only one name and a brief note about what they had done at the Institute so far. I started to put this card away thinking that they wouldn't be interested in anything, so why even bother calling. At that thought I stopped with my hand in midstream and realized that I was stuck on some invalidation. I created a rose, put the energy into that rose, blew it up, then picked up the phone and called. On the second ring a man answered and I asked for both the names on the card. He said he'd never heard of these people before but he was curious as to why I was calling, so again I jumped right in and asked if he'd ever had a psychic reading. Well, did he ever get excited; no, he'd never had a reading but had always wanted one. He'd been trying to get to the Church for a while but hadn't ever made it. So we talked about what we offer and do at the Berkeley Psychic Institute. He then had me talk to his wife as well. I must have spent a half hour on the phone with them. By the end of the conversation they were both so excited that they were coming for a reading this next week. I got off the phone and it hit me, another miracle had just happened.

Going back to the beginning of my speech—before I started the Berkeley Psychic Institute and Church of Divine Man, I didn't know what a mock-up was or a miracle. Well, I now know. Besides being a spiritual teacher and creating miracles daily, I now work with that terrible bunch of people my roommate told me about over five years ago. Yes, I've really only started. Thank you.

Editorial

by Susan Hull Bostwick

We sat as observers and as seers at the Berkeley Psychic Institute's annual Prediction Party attended by more than 250 clairvoyants. Natural and man-made disasters, political milestones, economic and religious changes, and more were looked at by these psychics for 1986. A telephone hookup to six of the nine locations from Sacramento to San Diego brought instant feedback to the questions and created validation throughout the one hour trance session. "We're getting the same answers all the way around." At this response there was an audible exclamation of pleasure throughtout. See page 24 for a full story of what they saw in our future and a look at a report card on last year's predictions.

When we further gaze into the future and see what the next four to five years will bring in the area of individual freedoms, it can be a little unnerving. If the immediate past speaks about the immediate future, many people may need to do a lot of soul searching. A decision needs to be made; to act or to continue to let someone else act. Let's look at the situation on civil rights: Do you really have the freedom to chose the medical or healing service suited to your own needs? Two women injured in a hit and run auto-truck accident were denied benefits because they used unorthodox healing services. A San Jose nutritionist was brought to trial and convicted recently for practicing medicine without a license (out of fear her employers closed their doors). The insurance industry is running people out of business: Ukiah obstetricians met recently to decide whether to stop offering birthing services at the local hospital because of the high premiums. Doctors are pressured to do unnecessary surgery such as hysterectomy and cesearian sections in order to pay for malpractice insurance. The "good" doctors are leaving the business.

Do you really have protections against the state determining what you can believe? U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese would change the Constitution to say what he thinks it really means: the "establishment" clause merely means that congress shouldn't create a national church and the First Ammendment has no jurisdiction in the states. The Freedom Council, a right wing religious group, alleges there shouldn't be separation of church and state and advocates putting God back into government. There is a Christian "talent bank" at the American Coalition for Traditional Values which screens people for federal jobs based on their Christian beliefs. Their object: recruit Christians into government jobs. Meese has cronies in this group. A Bay Area planning commission inquiry into a "women's healing clinic" in a church brought about the judgement of what is and isn't the spiritual work of a church and threatened passage of a city permit to operate as a church in a downtown location.

The cause for alarm is that your free choice may be threatened. In order to chose your own medical or healing care, the choices need to be there, not scared off by medical witch hunters and insurance companies. If you are to believe in psychic healing, spiritual counseling and clairvoyance, the churches which offer this need to have the freedom to exist.

Write your representatives and object to any moves to rewrite the U.S. Constitution and advocate curbing medical insurance claims. Be responsible for your own spiritual and physical health care.

Dune Review

I really enjoy reading Psychic Life, but I have one complaint - the film review of DUNE in Vol. 5 No. 4. It seemed to me although Miss Dunlavy is well-informed in her knowledge of psychic work, she is not well informed in the book, Dune, or in the movie of the same name.

The book is not 900 pages long - my paperback copy runs 537 pages and that includes the glossary, appendicies and a map. Paul Atreides, as any Dune fan would know, is the Kwisatz Haderack, not the Haddad Shad'rac, as Miss Dunlavy calls him. I'm extremely curious to find out where she obtained the incorrect name. Paul's father, Leto, is the Duke of House Atreides, on the Planet Caladan. But this is nit-picking you may say. Perhaps, but to leave the review of a classic such as Dune to someone who doesn't research is as ridiculous as sending a novice psychic on a major healing.

Perhaps Miss Dunlavy should read the books - I have, and I have enjoyed them. They tell a much different story than the one Miss Dunlavy writes in her review.

P.S. Please try and get your magazine distributed in a few stores here in Orange County. Thank You.

Brazilian Trance Medium

A friend of mine bought the magazine, Vol. 5 No. 2, the issue on trance mediumship. Since 1979 I have worked in Brazil as a trance medium in the "Associagao Crista de Cultura Espirita Os Caminheiros" (Christian Assoc. of Spiritual Culture). This association like hundreds in Brazil, is based on the spiritualist doctrine codified by Allan Kardec. I am a close friend of the medium Luiz Gasparetto, who also works in this association. We work with a group of disconnected painters (Gauguin, Renior, Picasso, Matisse, Michelangelo, etc.).

I can share this information with you, if you'd like.

Ridiculous Amusement

You guys crack me up, or perhaps I should use your cliche, "I am amused." Sometimes you seem to be amused with your noses in the air but that's a digression. I've known lots of different spiritual groups in my time and have only been able to dabble, not ever delve, in their "beliefs." After sticking my tentacles briefly in these cults I always pull back thinking "these guys are crazy." Maybe they are in tune with true spirit and a higher reality, but what I see right here on old planet earth is always too weird. These more advanced spirits may be transcending the mundane but they walk around with their eyes glazed over, very serious faces, always move slowly and virtuously speaking only in mellow tones and have bratty unmanageable kids (the ones that haven't left their families for the more spiritual plane that is). Somehow the physical manifestation of spirit is always bullshit. There seems to be no meeting ground between spirit and bodies. That's what I like about you guys. You are the first group I've ever seen who has stated my strongest belief that if you can't laugh at it, it isn't real. But then I see you guys turning that into the dogma of "being amused." Why do you always have to write, "I am amused," or "I felt amused" or something like that. Let's have a little variety. How about, "It cracked me up," or "It was funny," or "hilarious," or "downright ridiculous!" Cause it really is! The best thing I ever read about Jesus was that on the whole trip to Calvary to be crucified he laughed, and that's what pissed the people off so bad. That's something I can believe. After all Jesus had it together. Imagine everyone trying to pull such a heavy trip on him and him just laughing, it's enough to crack me up. All the people shouting, "Prove you're God! Save yourself from the cross!" and him laughing, "Why should I, this is fun." No wonder they didn't understand and left that part out of the writing. Well anyways, you guys sound like you are having fun. The only problem I see is that so many of you have been on the spiritual bandwagon so long that you tend to turn amusement into something transcendental. (I have a friend who just got a new house and she didn't call it a "move," she called it a "transition.") I'd like to join the Berkeley Psychic Institute to learn how to see auras and all that fun stuff, but the move is not possible at this time. I'll just have to keep figuring it all by myself. Meanwhile, I enclose a check for a subscription to your magazine.

JOB, BUSINESS & CAREER READINGS

BY REV. ERICH HORN

(415) 653-6708

San Francisco Bay Area

I've been a clairvoyant reader for five years. I can help you get to where you want to be in your job, business or career.

I've helped people double their sales, deal with pressure, and find what is keeping them from their highest potential. I can look at what is keeping you back from enjoying your job.

In a reading I look at who you are creating for in your job--how much for you and how much for others. Are your goals in affinity with you? I read both your energy and the energy in your workspace and will answer your questions. Also, I can do healings on request.

I tend to forget how capable I am and get bogged down with lots of problems.
This reading validated my creativity and said hello to some of the things that are holding me back.
Megan Manning, Film Director and Actress

Rev. Erich Horn's enthusiastic use of psychic abilities was a wonderful tonic for me when I was feeling tired and dragged out. Erich's reading let me bring back the playful child in myself.
Heather Smyth, Printer, Deja Vu Publishing Company

After my reading with Rev. Erich Horn, I more than tripled the number of contracts I pulled in at my job.

The Last Goodbye

Preschooler Meets Spirit of Dead Playmate

All of a sudden I started to grieve. A lump welled up in my throat, tears came rolling down my cheeks and I felt an intense sadness. And all I had done was to sit down to prepare myself for a psychic reading.

I didn't know what was happening to me or why. As I began to meditate, a memory of when I was four years old popped up. How could I have forgotten my special friend? Oh, the pain and grief and love this buried memory stirred up in me.

When I attended preschool I had a very close friend; a little girl named Lynn. From the moment we met we had a very close affinity for one another. Every day we would play together; we would make up stories and then we would act them out.

One day it suddenly occurred to me that it had been a while since I had seen Lynn at school. I missed her. Then I saw her across the playground coming toward me. It seemed to me that she was floating a few feet off the ground. I shook my head a few times and looked again-- this time she walked more normal. Then it seemed like her feet were off the ground again. I shook my head because I thought it would jiggle my eyes into seeing right.

Lynn was smiling. "Where have you been? I've been waiting to play with you." "Erich," Lynn said, "I've come back to tell you that I'm going away and that I won't be coming back, but I just had to come and tell you goodbye." She turned away from me and was going back across the playground. I yelled, "Wait Lynn, wait," and ran after her.

There were borders around the playground that we weren't supposed to cross but I followed her. Then suddenly I couldn't see her anymore. She had just disappeared.

"Erich! Erich Horn, you get back on this playground this minute," yelled my preschool teacher, Mrs. Anglephant. She came running across the playground and bawled me out for being out of bounds. "Good thing I came out here to look for you, Erich. I've got something that I'd like to talk to you about." "You know your little friend Lynn, well, she has been very sick for about two weeks and she has been in the hospital in an oxygen tent. I'm sorry to have to tell you this but I just found out that Lynn died yesterday."

"But I just saw her, I was just talking to her." Smack! --right across the face, Mrs. Angelphant slapped me. "Don't say that, how dare you say that, Erich Horn? How could you make up such a lie?" "But I saw her, I did!" Mrs. Anglephant definitely did not want to hear this. I was in disgrace.

When my mother came to pick me up at the end of the day, Mrs. Anglephant told her about finding me off the playground, telling me about my friend dying and me having the nerve to say to her that I had just been talking to her. Of all the lies to tell! I noticed she forgot to mention about slapping me.

My mother burst out crying. She told Mrs. Anglephant and me that about four months ago a good friend of hers had died and that soon afterwards she appeared to her, plain as daylight, and said that she had just come back to say goodbye and not to worry -- everything was all right. My mother had never told anyone about that experience even though it shook her to the core. She was afraid people would call her crazy. When she found out that the same thing had just happened to me, it lit up all her grief again. At the same time it was a validation to her spirit that at least something like that happened to someone else.

I don't know what "Mrs. Elephant" made out of it. Must have been a funny cosmic joke played upon her, a dramatic teaching for her spirit to witness, happening before her very eyes. Either that or she was convinced that insanity ran in my family.

Now, that I had relived that buried memory, I understood why out of the blue, I had started to cry. I looked at the spiritual contract that Lynn and I had made with each other; our agreement on a spirit level was that she would just be on the earth for a short time. She agreed to this to help me keep on my path spiritually.

Rather than have a lot of my energy trapped in the past, I proceeded to bring this old memory into present time and to de-energize the mental image picture. After using these psychic tools, I was now ready to go and do the psychic reading.

I asked the readee, "Did you have a friend that died recently and after that friend died, your friend appeared to you and told you that she just came back to say goodbye, and you've never told anyone about this because they might think you are crazy?"

The readee burst into tears. This was the very communication that she had come in for. Long before the readee even sat down for the reading did my matching picture or similar life experience with her lit up. ☆

Ask Sharon

by Sharon Santos

Where's My Relationship With A Man?

Dear Sharon,
I came down and had a reading at one of the Berkeley Psychic Institutes. I had taken some classes five years ago, but don't remember much about them. I was told that I have a lot of invalidation where I live. What can I do to get out of this invalidation?

Dennis Benoit
Cilcelvill, CA

Hello Dennis,
As I look at you I see a lot of invalidation in your aura from your family. They can't seem to get you under control (Ha! Ha!), even though you have put a lot of miles between you and them. However, as a spirit there is no time or space. So you might want to take a class or two again. Good Luck.

Sharon

Dear Sharon,
I met a very creative man who argued with me about the silliness of psychic healings. However, he listened to the advice of a psychic who told him he could find the wife he was looking for, who matched a list of his preferences, in the Philippines. Not only did he find his wife, he also had several great experiences...

I received a very hysterical call from him at 5:30 a.m. He had witnessed a psychic surgeon; the healer even used his finger to make an incision! He screamed over the phone for me to come to the Philippines or at least to send three pictures of myself, so that this healer could heal me of my M.S.

What I want to know is, is this situation part of the healing and reading I just recently received at the Berkeley Psychic Institute? I am now in remission of my M.S. and have learned to take myself less seriously to create a better communication with my body.

Pam

Hello Pam,
I enjoyed your story very much and was very amused at your friend and his ability to create such a great way to make psychic healing real for himself.

I do see that this is part of the healing process you were able to create for yourself after your communication at the Berkeley Psychic Institute, getting your amusement back, and communication with the healers that you need with no time, space or judgment to interfere. What a great creation for your own miracle.

Congratulations to your friend for finding his wife.

Sharon

Dear Sharon,
I am a 35 year old woman, fairly attractive. Every time I start a new relationship with a man, I always seem to make up excuses for ending them. Why can't I have a lasting relationship?

Janet

Hello Janet,
It looks like much of your energy is in the future and that you are not allowing yourself to enjoy the experience you have created when it occurs. You are looking at all your expectations and forget to look at what is happening and what you are creating at the moment.

The Berkeley Psychic Institute of Berkeley has a Missionary Healing Program. The psychics in this program go out into the community and meet everyone from house-rumbling poltergeists to hospital-bound cancer patients wanting a hello. The following is a compilation from a report made by the psychics who went to do this particular missionary healing.

BACKGROUND

Mrs. X left an urgent message for a missionary healing on the answering machine. She requested a healing for her 31 year old Chinese husband who in February had developed hepotoma (a liver problem). Mr. X had undergone surgery in March when it was discovered that both lobes were affected, and that one surgery would not be effective. Since then the cancer had spread to the lymph nodes. A social worker at the hospital had referred Mrs. X to the Missionary Healing Program. Mr. nor Mrs. X had ever used a psychic or spiritual healer before this time.

THE HEALING

The hospital where Mr. X was treated is basically for terminal patients. The energy of the hospital reflects this strongly—the staff was subdued and even seemed mildly surprised and unprepared for visitors.

Mr. X had a small room to himself. Mrs. X was clearly devoted to him and desperate for him to get well. Mr. X looked wasted and had little physical energy. Since he had an oxygen hose in his mouth it was difficult to communicate verbally, but when he was in his body he would follow us with his eyes. Spirit to spirit communication was very clear.

We sat down to find our reading space. As soon as we had grounded and owned the room for ourselves (made it safe), Mr. X left his body and fell asleep. First we worked on the energy of the hospital; it was set with the expectation that all patients would die and there was little room for anything else to happen.

We then removed the chemotherapy energy out of Mr. X's body -- this chemical energy made it difficult for him to communicate to his body. We also communicated to Mrs. X that her energy was in and around her husband trying to heal him. This interfered with him healing himself. She was able to find her amusement and pull her energy back.

It wasn't until this point that we could take a look at the energy which had created cancer. I saw Mr. X's mother very clearly - on an energy level she looked like an imperious Chinese Empress Dowager. He had several very strong contracts with her mother; he had been chosen out of all the other children to stay home. She had been running her energy in his body for 30 years.

I talked about the karma between Mr. X and his mother resulting from a past life where he had murdered her. We spoke out loud to Mr. X the whole time even though he was asleep. As soon as I mentioned this karmic incident, he woke up, looked straight at us, raised his head and spoke for the first time saying "You're right, I did murder her in a past life." He then went back to sleep. This to me was a tremendous validation. I continued on to say that he was attempting to break those contracts with his mother by getting married and moving away, and that his mother was intent on punishing him. He was the favorite son, the healer of the family and besides he owed her due to the karma; he had no right to leave her.

In this reading Mr. X received lots of healing and information so he could begin to heal himself, make separations, and learn how to forgive himself. He took some tremendous steps toward his spiritual growth.

The missionary healers were requested to come back for a second time. Mr. X was in a totally different space - he had a lot of his energy back. We now noticed anger about what had happened to his body, around him. He wanted information on his next step.

I could see in neutrality that he was getting ready to leave his body. We communicated about the spiritual growth step of a spirit leaving the body. We helped the couple make separations by clearing out past life pictures and bringing their relationship into present time. A missionary healer had brought along a copy of last rites and these were read.

It was a tremendous growth space to see a spirit make this decision.

EPILOGUE

Mr. X died two days later on July 5, 1984. To our society in general this may mean that our missionary healing was a failure, but as a clairvoyant healer I see it as just the opposite. I remember this healing as being a success in that it was a miracle to watch and validate Mr. X being so capable as to pull in the Missionary Healers and get the information he needed to take his next steps on his spiritual path.

YOSEMITE:

Keeper of the Dead

by Melissa Woodburn

"Oh look, the Indians are bringing us flowers." And they were — they were honoring us, piling energy flowers all around our tent. It was my second trip to Tuolumne Meadows, traveling with a group of psychic women, and the Indian spirits were ready for us.

Then the leader emerged, a young chief on a white horse. He had a magnificent white feather headdress and lance as symbols of his station. I said hello and was amused at seeing him so clearly. "Why are you honoring us?" He said I had ruled with him once as his female counterpart, and showed me a picture of myself in beaded moccasins and a doeskin tunic. I had been a keeper of the dead, preparing bodies for outdoor "burial" on platforms and being the guardian of a multi-level catacomb where other bodies were preserved.

All those spirits wanted me back! As Indians, they were held to the land. They had not been able to take their next steps, to take other bodies. They were stuck. I, however, had moved on. I had been able to take many other bodies since then and had had many other life experiences. I was no longer held to Yosemite Valley. They wanted my help to escape, to free themselves as I had. A slowly building sense of fear accompanied the setting of the sun for me. I had never been bothered by fear in the woods before. But that night, a panic kept rising in me. I kept getting a very clear vision of a man right outside our tent, poised with a knife in his hand, about to attack. My body was shaking in a complete state of survival. As a clairvoyant all I could see were images of death in my aura.

One of my friends helped me stoke the fire, and gave me a light to put by my bed. She looked clairvoyantly and said she could see all of the dead Indians from the catacombs coming back to me, their guardian, for a healing, for their release. She watched from across the tent as I lay in bed and shook. I tried to remember my tools as a psychic to help me get through the night.

Then one of the other women, who had drifted off to sleep, came slamming back into her body from the astral. Without waking up, she yelled out at the dark beings surrounding me, "I don't know what you guys are doing, but I'm not playing that game!" I found my sense of humor at this display. A short while later the fourth woman, who had also been drifting in and out of sleep woke up to tell me that the Supreme Being had sent her back with a message. She said, "The Supreme Being told me to tell you that you are not of the dead." This simple message made me feel a lot better. It also reminded me of the Lord's Prayer, and what a miraculous healing tool that communication could be. Saying the Lord's Prayer out loud, I regained an awareness of myself as spirit, as I was in 1985, lying in a tent on a psychic women's retreat. The Lord's Prayer helped me to remember that I was no longer the caretaker for all the dead souls in the Yosemite Valley. Slowly, the blackness of the dead people receded, and with it went the fear and the shaking of my body. I had healed myself and I had completed my communication with that lifetime as a Yosemite Indian. I finally fell asleep, to awaken refreshed and in good spirits the next day.

Several months later someone showed me a newspaper clipping about a couple who had fallen to their deaths in Yosemite on the night I had been there. The woman's body was full of knife wounds, and they had fallen while struggling. I remembered the image I had gotten of a man about to attack our tent with a knife, and I smiled. I was no longer the keeper of the dead in Yosemite Valley, and Boy! Was I glad!☆

Boys Night Out: A Psychic Necessity

What are the changes that take place in a man as he begins to become aware of himself as a spirit? Not just as a spirit in a body, but as a spirit in a male body.

One of the first encounters he has is with female energy and how it affects him. As a man begins to find his separations from female energy and starts to experience his own energy, he will encounter the resistance to the female energy in his space; he'll start to feel guilty; he's a bad boy; he should be doing something else. Female energy is sometimes so strong that a man gives up his space to it and allows it to control him. Being stuck in this game can be a no win situation. He begins to equate not being able to have (eg. his space) with females and starts to blame all women because of his inability to control his space. How does a man begin to get out of the game? Simple, it's called communication. It's as simple as a "HELLO, I SEE WHO YOU ARE AND WHERE YOU ARE STUCK." One traditional way for this communication to take place from one man to another is on "the boys' night out". Whether it is a night to drink beer or a Bible discussion meeting among all men, the communication level from one man to another is always the same: Hello, I recognize who you are. Only another spirit in a male body can give this type of communication because only he has the experience and information about what it means to be a man. ☆

You Are Not Your Mother

"Men don't think they are their mothers," commented a male guest in one of my women's healing classes. "They may spend a good deal of their life trying to take that creative energy that helped make their body out of their 'space,' they may resist their mother, they may even be angry at their mother and therefore other women, but they don't think they are their mother."

As a teacher, I have found that 'fear of becoming your mother' is common. Some of the meditations and work we do in these classes are just on this level. Because we have the same body type as our mother we have an agreement about the vibration of energy in the body that is female and creative. As little girls we often adopt our mother's moral code as part of our body. As we grow older the only way that some women can separate from that energy is to try the opposite end of those ethics. There are numerous ways to do this, from punk to conservative housewife, depending on which end of the dichotomy is needed. Often what they were becoming was ambiguous but as long as it wasn't mother it was OK. Today many women are beginning to understand that there are other ways to "not become your mother." It's fun to be psychic and learn separations in a more neutral and kindergarten way.

Whenever I teach in my women's healing classes that we choose our parents I always get a strong emotional response from the students. We made those choices either to learn something, teach something or end a cycle. It's the body energies that sometimes make this a confusing issue. A few years ago I had a student get up and run out of the room when we began looking at mothers. She said, "I didn't know we'd talk about that in this class," and left. She didn't come back to this class until after she had graduated from her clairvoyant training program, at which point she was ready to start to look at these pictures. It's always fun to point out that parents are just spirit in a body just like any spirit in any body you have communicated with or have known. It's the body programming and agreements that we get to work on like a puzzle this lifetime. Being psychic and finding spiritual freedom is really only becoming more you. Working on this energy doesn't mean you hate your mother. It only means you are taking her energy out of your space, energy she put there (and you accepted) because probably no one communicated to her about spirit having its own space and free will.

With all the dichotomies God gave us to amuse ourselves on the planet: male-female, parent-child, to name a few, we should certainly never be bored. But tell me, have you called your mother today?

This means I work with you on both your spirit / energy level and your physical level, using my combined experience to create sessions that are safe and truly nurturing for energy-sensitive people. In this way, you as a spirit have the space to heal your own body and experience a new ease of movement you may have never known."

Rockin' n' Rollin' with Trager Bodywork

"Despite what you may have heard, bodywork need not be painful to be effective. My particular specialty is Trager bodywork, which is known for its gentle rocking and stretching. In Trager work, no oils or lotions are used, and the client wears loose, comfortable clothing, lying on a specially-made, well padded table. Though Trager work is very gentle, it is surprisingly effective for many people in releasing long-term tension and teaching the body new, stress-free ways of movement."

Spirit Guide

by Caitilin Goodsell

The Sister That Wouldn't Leave

How many life times can you be your sister's keeper?

CEG: I am saying "Hello" to you as a spirit and asking you to show me what you want me to talk about. I see you vibrating at a pearly white, just above your head. I also see a pearly white energy in your heart chakra. You are showing me that this is a being, NOT you, even though it responds to my "hello" to you and looks just like your energy.

When I look at your communication with the God of your heart, I see you looking at your own information, but blocked from it by this being living in your heart.

This being is from your most recent two past lives. In the first, I see you with an infant sister. She dies. You love her and miss her, and bring her into your space as a spirit guide. She remains there, an unseen companion, the rest of that life.

In the second, you agree to be born together as twin sisters. She lacks some information and loses her body shortly after conception. She again remains with you, in spirit, through that lifetime.

By this lifetime, she has been so close to you for so long that she's forgotten that she is not you. She has been living in your heart chakra since before birth. Everyone perceives her as part of you - even you - but still, she is NOT.

This is why you can be very loving and still not feel it for yourself. Why no matter how hard you try, you remain unsatisfied and unhappy. Why you have trouble knowing what you really want. Why your sense of really knowing yourself, your truth, the God of your heart, always remains just out of reach.

MJB: Can we - I - get rid of this being? Can she move on?

CEG: Yes. You've been working toward this for many years. You only needed to have someone else see it for you to have this information on a conscious level.

Say "Hello" to her now...recognize her as a separate spirit...ask the Supreme Being to take her out of your space, to heal her, to help her - both of you - to regain your spiritual autonomy. ☆

LEA UHLMAN

"NOW I KNOW THERE'S A GOOD LIFE WAITING FOR ME."

Lea Uhlman has in excess of ten years as a psychic. She does life readings, Tarot readings, psychometry and aspect work. She is also a lecturer and an instructor in the psychic, teaching classes that are ongoing in the Vallejo area on Monday nights, and are beginning in Walnut Creek in September.

In addition, her other areas of expertise include counseling, stress reduction with relaxation techniques and business projections.

Lea is an R.N., has a B.S., Masters on Health Services, and has been a Family Nurse Practitioner for seven years. She has an Associate Juris Sacrae (Ministerial degree) from Great Western University. She is also a member of the Association of Psychic Practitioners.

The headline statement was made about Lea Uhlman because of the type of work that she does with aspect therapy. Other statements include:

"Before I went to Lea Uhlman, I felt my life was over. I was ill all the time, broke, and friendless. I lived each day in a great abyss of depression. I wanted to die — I was tired of this life."

"Since working with Lea and using her aspects to change, my life has totally turned around. I'm in much better health and I now realize I can reach the goals I've set for myself."

The aspect therapy mentioned above is a dynamic new process which utilizes psychic ability to identify and locate negative internal programming, and then transforms such programming into positive affirmation, often with dramatic results.

What Are Aspects? — "Aspects" is a term given to the negative internal programs that limit us and sabotage our good intentions. Sometimes called "thought forms," they can also be compared to tiny computer memory chips, each programmed to do a specific, but negative job. Unlike computer chips, however, they are conscious, and are self-programmed to continue indefinitely, to "do their job." An individual aspect can be located and communicated with psychically, by calling it by the particular negative statement or attitude that is its job to perpetuate. Examples of the "names" of aspects might be, "I must always be out of money," "I can never be loved," or "I must be overweight to be safe."

How Do Aspects Affect Us? — Aspects bring about situations or attitudes in our daily lives that usually persist no matter how contrary they are to our conscious desire for growth or betterment. If a person had the above aspects for example, he or she would find it very difficult to hold onto money, stay in a relationship, or lose weight.

How Do Aspects Originate? — Aspects are formed at times in our lives when we felt both a strong emotion, such as fear, grief or anger, and accepted a strong negative idea or statement about ourselves as true. Lea Uhlman has found that aspects can originate from a variety of sources, most commonly from our parents, a traumatic or unpleasant situation, our cultural conditioning, a past-life situation or even the passing comment of a friend. An aspect can also originate from something we tell ourselves.

Lea Uhlman works psychically with people to change this type of negative programming by contacting each individual aspect and the "High-Self" of a person and persuading the aspect to take on a new "job." The aspects mentioned previously, for example, could be transformed into the affirmations: "I always have plenty of money," "I have a satisfying relationship," and "My body maintains the perfect weight for my frame, with no excess."

Most people Lea has worked with manifest the new positive changes in their lives, anywhere from the next day to three or four weeks later. Depending on what aspects they have worked on, Lea's clients have felt much more positive and accepting of themselves, have created healthy and loving relationships, generated financial success, lost weight and kept it off, and so on.

Tapes — For those who find tapes a useful tool, Lea has a varied selection to choose from, including: Releasing Depression, Relaxation Techniques for Protection & Stability, Sleep Tape, Stop Smoking, Improving Self Image, Releasing Excess Weight, Kundalini Energy Exercise, Cosmic Laws, Epilepsy, Suicide Prevention, Assertiveness and more.

Psychic Questions & Answers

by Carol McCarthy

Why do people need psychic tools. Aren't people psychic anyway?

People are psychic whether they use psychic tools or not, but using psychic tools creates more awareness. It can mean the difference between someone using their abilities, and their abilities using them. This is why many people are afraid to tap into their abilities, because they've had previous experiences where they felt they weren't in control. By using psychic tools or mechanical techniques, one can bring his awareness up to where one can be in charge of his or her own psychic or spiritual abilities. As the icing on the cake, it can also be a lot of fun and take the effort and invalidation out of growing and learning as a spirit creating through a body.

What is a psychic surgeon?

Psychic surgery is the name for a type of healing performed by a psychic surgeon - an entity or spirit without a body, healing through someone with a body. A psychic surgeon uses his specialized healing abilities to focus on the physical healing rather than the spiritual healing alone (as in the case of a healing master or spirit guide).

Psychic surgeons are well known in South America and the Philippines. This form of spiritual and physical healing baffles doctors and laymen alike. There are even special hospitals for these healings where men and women bring the beings (psychic surgeons) through them to do their astonishing healing work.

There are other ways of using this type of healing guide however, ranging from a dramatic physical healing to a less physical but equally dramatic body-being integration. Using the spirits called psychic surgeons can bring about many miracles.

Why do babies look so often at the top of people's heads?

A baby is a spirit creating through a small body. However, this does not mean that the spirit is also small! Quite the contrary. The baby as a spirit is learning to use his/her energy in the body, and the newness of the body and spirit working together is fascinating, delightful and sometimes frustrating. This is also true for adult bodies. Sometimes our spiritual energy isn't all the way in our bodies (this can create a spaced out feeling or unconsciousness). Sometimes our energy is more above than within them, and as the baby as spirit looks at the adult as spirit, this is often what the baby is looking at and communicating to. It can be rewarding and fun to acknowledge this with a baby; they enjoy this spirit to spirit communication. Babies have a lot of information, too.

What is a Prayer Ring?

A prayer ring consists of a group of people who sit in a circle and pray for the same person. These people form an agreement. It is believed that the group prayer raises the healing vibration of, for example, a sick person so that the person can heal himself. The people forming the prayer ring are in agreement to communicate with the Supreme Being, or their personal concept of God, to help bring about the healing of the person who is ill. It is also believed that this group force not only raises the vibration for healing, but also lowers the destructive forces causing the illness.

If you are interested in reading about psychic surgery there are many books on the subject. Every Wall & Door by Anne Dooley is one I recommend and on healing and prayer: Edgar Cayce on Healing by Mary Ellen Carter and William A. McGary. ☆

Psychic Life Reporter Visits Lord Michael

Spirit Commands: "Listen to the Voices"

by Gail Halloran

There are many questions that come to mind when approaching the subject of channeling. Unfortunately, there is not a plethora of research material to be found. Aside from a few well known mediums who have published accounts or diaries of their channeling experiences, this is not a widely accepted practice in our society at large. Many people have lost touch with the spirit world and feel that the age of miracles has passed; many people also disbelieve in the ability of the prophets, an ability which could sometimes be known as channeling.

In the last issue of This Is Your Psychic Life Magazine, Orpheus Phylos was interviewed. Orpheus channels a being named Lord Michael, also known as the Archangel Michael, who states that he is one of twelve Solar Lords who created this planet. Orpheus has been channeling Michael for several years, sometimes up to ten hours a day. The following is my first hand account of an evening with this channel.

A small, low stage is set up in the front of the room, a single chair and microphone stand are now the only occupants. Thirty or so people are seated in small groups or pairs in a semi-circle around the stage area.

Before long, Orpheus Phylos enters from the back of the room. Immediately she flashes the audience a comforting smile and jokingly puts them at ease. She briefly explains what is about to happen, all the while preparing herself. Orpheus takes off her shoes, pulls her feet up into the chair, cross-legged, and her lap is covered by a crocheted afghan. Orpheus explains that she can never predict what Michael is going to do once in her body, and so she must be ready for anything. Sometimes he sits, sometimes he holds the microphone, once or twice he has walked around! By the end of her story, her body is ready and she closes her eyes. Her hands rest palms up on her knees.

The transition is subtle. Her body goes slightly limp, closer to relaxed. Then the voice takes over. At first, it is very gutteral and almost impossible to understand. Using the lower register of Orpheus' vocal cords, Lord Michael sounds like the rest of us when we've been woken up in the middle of the night, only worse!

Slowly, over the next two hours, Lord Michael, a being who has never had a body, warms up to the body he borrows from Orpheus Phylos; it is as if he is also warming up to his audience. As a psychic who works with trance mediums, the first thing I notice is that Michael doesn't move Orpheus' energy totally out of the body before he comes in. This makes it slow going for him, as he must push and wedge his way into the body, past all of her pictures about her body. After 20 minutes or so, the eyes begin opening periodically, and slowly the head turns to address various parts of the group listening. And by the end of the evening one or both feet end up dangling from the chair, just barely touching the floor. (Michael doesn't wear the high heels, and Orpheus' body is short!) The last to show up are the facial expressions, although Michael never seems to get used to the bright lights in the room. He tends to squint around the eyes the whole time he's in the body.

Over the course of the evening, Lord Michael, the Archangel Michael, puts forth his reasons for coming to the planet earth. He talks of great changes that are coming, and the destruction of our planet. He reveals the importance to those that are ready of travelling to the four corners area of the United States, where Utah, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona meet, to establish a base of physical and spiritual survival. He talks of the inner world of spirits who want to help save the survivors of our planet, and he tells of the need for large crystals to replicate the devices being built by these beings at the center of our planet. Out of context the story line sounds weak, but somehow that night we all followed it closely, through the deep gutteral mechanics of his/her voice.

As Michael slowly was able to animate the body he used, he interacted more with the audience. At the end he took questions from the floor. Michael had a special communication with one of Orpheus' friends. He said she was capable and would do well as a channel. Michael was charming and personable and the woman was flattered. My question had to do with what it was like for Michael to be in a physical body. Michael turned and looked at me, eyes wide open, and directed the full force of his charm at me. He discussed the feeling of density, as though moving into a much slower medium. He talked of how very different it was, and at that point I felt that Michael liked me and that we were pals. He even winked during one comment as he described the phenomenon of people like alcoholics and drug users who became the training ground for spirits without bodies, not exactly walk-ins, but something like that. He seemed to be acknowledging that I knew what he was talking about, because obviously I was no dummy, I was no novice. I could understand that people like that were open prey to spirits who wanted to experience being in a body, but just for a little while, and with no ultimate responsibility for the body. He, for example, could not stop and grow a body from birth every time he needed one. It was important that he be able to channel his messages.

Meanwhile, my companion was whispering at me about grounding my body. She even passed me a note about using my psychic tools to help keep separation between me and Michael. I nodded and smiled sweetly and handed the note back, with no comprehension of what it had really said. I have to give Michael credit. He was a real charmer! After five years of training as a clairvoyant, a healer, a spiritual counselor and a capable psychic who can protect myself under any circumstances, all my tools went right out the window because Michael liked me and he was talking to me. I guess that's part of why people like to channel him! He can make you feel so special, so chosen.

My companion also asked a question, and this one had to do with whether Lord Michael and his contemporaries were aware of the activities of psychic groups on the planet. After a split second of thought, Michael launched into a tirade about the hierarchy of spirits who watch over this planet. There are teachers, master teachers, lords and overlords He was omniscient and therefore knew and saw all things on this planet. By the time he finished putting my colleague into her miniscule place in the overall scheme of things, Michael was very close to yelling at her. He practically spit out the word psychic, denoting a definite distaste on his part, almost a contempt. I thought it was pretty amazing that someone who was careful to charm and teach the rest of the time, got so upset at this question. But somehow it was very important to Michael that those of us who are psychic understand our small roles in the overall plan of the cosmos.

The Archangel Michael, from a 14th Century Byzantine icon. He is shown holding the messenger's staff, one of his symbolic attributes.

Michael finished the evening with a meditation of sorts. The last thing he talked about was the "Council of Twelve", spirit guides that each of us has to help us through life. He let us know that during the course of the evening he had put each of us in touch with our own Council of Twelve, and that all we needed to do was to learn to listen to the voices. He said we should learn to listen to the "father within", and that he and they would help us to survive the trials about to begin, the changes that Michael's presence heralds on this planet. It was then that I remembered that Orpheus had begun the evening by having all of us turn up our telepathic abilities and say hello to everyone else in the room, silently. This telepathic ability was the key to our being able to hear our own council, and we were told to use this ability to "listen to the voices".

Soon after this, Lord Michael left, as quietly as he had come. Orpheus Phylos returned cheerful, and felt that the evening had gone well, judging from the energies she felt in her body. The lecture format was ended, and Orpheus mingled with groups in the audience. Two hours was a good lecture, we were told.

I thanked Orpheus for her hospitality. She seemed so small and fragile and was not totally back to herself yet. She acknowledged this and said it often took her a few hours to come all the way back in. She seemed satisfied and the lack of memory of four-fifths of her life seemed unimportant to her right now. As she had said that afternoon, as long as she ate what Michael advised her to, fresh fruits and vegetables, no meat, no caffine, she seemed to feel OK. These rules and inconveniences, she indicated, were small prices to pay for the spiritual evolution she gained at the hands of Michael.

Tonight the session had gone well. To a channel, that is very important. Sometimes that is all that is important. ☆

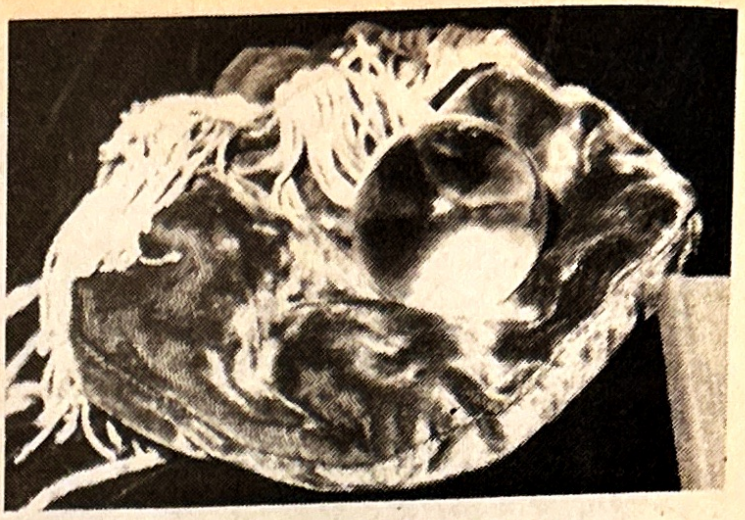
PREDICTIONS '86

Forcast For A New Year

by Beth Dunlavy



Over 200 psychics met at a 1986 Prediction Party held at Berkeley Psychic Institutes throughout the state of California; they used their clairvoyance and precognitive abilities to look at the following questions:

What will be the overall theme of women's growth in 1986?

Women will be more independent and have more certainty, resulting in clearer and more relaxed male-female communication. More women will choose traditional, family-oriented roles and will have an increasing awareness of pregnancy as a psychic experience; less reliance will be placed on medical expertise.

The Roe vs.-Wade abortion issue will be debated; no change in the law will result.

What are the major geological or climatic changes in 1986?

March brings volcanic activity in Northern California and earthquakes in the Caribbean - causing a tidal wave. Others are expected in Italy, in the San Diego area in June and July, and in the Himalayas.

Dramatic changes in the weather result in higher tides worldwide, which with other changes in the ocean will cause more whales to surface.

What are the major technological breakthroughs?

Advances will be made in insect and virus control. Successful cloning experimentation will regenerate an organism. A blood filtering mechanism will be created.

The U.S. government will place weapons in space by August.

Radiotelescopes detect a celestial body near our solar system with a water core.

Robots will be used to explore the ocean depths and deep space.

June brings advances in the use of holograms to transmit messages.

What are the events, trends, government legislation and court rulings affecting religious freedom in the United States?

A republican senator from Oklahoma will work to pass legislation that removes the separation of church and state.

The government will impose various laws to control the influence of churches. Changes in zoning ordinances will affect the building of churches; the state will try to put parochial schools out of business.

There will be a church sanctuary movement where churches will band together to prevent rights from being taken away. The Moral Majority will break up due to these changes.

A battle will be waged between TV evangelists and mainstream churches.

Major religious upheavals in India will cause resistance to cults in the United States.

A religious leader will be killed.

What do you see as major growth and changes for psychics and healers in 1986?

An increased acceptance and awareness of psychic abilities will give psychic healers more permission to work with the medical profession; they also will be forced to deal with legal issues. Psychics will be used more openly in police work. A September court case will reveal that the Mafia already uses them.

The growing acceptance of psychics and healers will upset the hierarchy of the Catholic church. The church will work with the U.S. government to counteract this trend. ☆

Predictions '85

Six major earthquakes in Latin America and China - The Mexico City earthquake and Columbian volcano fit into this category of fault related disasters.

Liz Taylor to Wed - Her engagement was announced in late November.

Major Pacific Ocean archeological discovery - The Titanic was discovered in the Atlantic in September.

High level of contamination of water tables from chemical spills - Big stories hit the newspapers about the loss of well water due to leakage of stored chemical wastes into ground water.

Reagan's government trying to direct religion in a particular direction - Reagan has supported an amendment for prayer in schools and expressed many pro-life opinions. Moral Majority support for a "litmus test" of religious beliefs for judges is influencing government officials.

Synthetic blood will be invented - Synthetic plasmas are used experimentally in other countries, although the FDA has not approved their use in U.S. However, there was a big breakthrough when the FDA approved use of the first synthetically reproduced growth hormone.

Wayne Newton going to die - This did not prove to be true.

The scientific community will acknowledge spirit - No advances were seen in this area.

HITLER:

The Spirit Behind the Man

Adolph Hitler was a medium who rose to power at a time when many spiritual and magical groups were operating within Germany.

Hitler was born at Braumau-am-Inn on April 20, 1889. This Austro-Bavarian frontier town enjoyed the singular reputation of being the birthplace of a number of mediums. Rausching, a contemporary of Hitler, in describing the Fuhrer, wrote: "One cannot help thinking of him as a medium. For most of the time mediums are ordinary, insignificant people. Suddenly they are endowed with what seems to be supernatural powers which set them apart from the rest of humanity. These powers are something that are outside their true personality—visitors, as it were, from another planet. The medium is possessed; once the crisis is past, they fall back again into mediocrity."

What powers influenced Hitler and where did he get his information? In Germany there were several groups that shared information. Among these were the German VRIL Society or the Luminous Lodge. Another was the Thule group (pronounced TooLee) of which Hitler, Hess and Himmler were members.

The legend of Thule is as old as the Germanic race. It was supposed to be an island that had disappeared near Greenland. Like Atlantis, Thule was thought to have been the magic center of a vanished civilization.

The Thule Society had the greatest impact on Hitler. In 1920, Dietrich Eckardt and another member of the Thule Society had made the acquaintance of Hitler. For the next three years, Eckardt was the constant companion of the little Reichswehr Corporal, dominating all his thoughts and acts.

Eckardt and his friends believed that the secrets of Thule had not perished; the secrets could be claimed by evoking powers with ceremonial magic. Beings intermediate between man and spirits from beyond would place at the disposal of initiates a reservoir of force which could be drawn on to enable Germany to dominate the world and be the cradle of the coming race of Supermen which would result from mutations of the human species. One day her legions would set out to annihilate everything, deriving their strength from the fountainhead of energy and guided by the great ones of the ancient world.

Such were the myths on which the Aryan doctrine of Eckardt and his friends was founded, and which these prophets of a "magic" form of socialism instilled into the mediumistic mind of Hitler.

In July of 1923, Eckardt became one of the seven founding members of the National Socialist Party. Later that year Eckardt died and the Thule group came under the influence of Haushofer, a former University professor and a student of eastern philosophy. That is when the group took on its true character of a society of initiates in communion with the invisible, and it became the magic center of the Nazi movement.

The Thule group occultism taught that the members of the group could not evoke these hidden forces save through the intermediary action of a magician who, in turn, could do nothing without a medium. It was Haushofer who was the magician, the grand master, and Hitler was the medium.

One observer wrote, "Listening to Hitler one suddenly has a vision of one who will lead mankind to glory. A light appears in a dark window. A gentleman with a comic moustache turns into an archangel. Then the archangel flies away...and there is Hitler sitting down bathed in sweat with glassy eyes."

Another writer of the time said, "I looked into his eyes, the eyes of a medium in trance...sometimes there seemed to be a sort of ectoplasm; the speaker's body seemed to be inhabited by something fluid. Afterwards he shrank again to insignificance, looking small and even vulgar. He seemed exhausted, his batteries run down."

The seven founders of the movement of the National Socialist Party were physically and spiritually certain that they were being sustained by the powers of darkness. They and the members of the Thule group were going to be masters of the world, protected against all dangers. They undertook to commit suicide if they broke their pact, and to perform human sacrifices.

Exterminations were considered a means of overcoming the indifference of the "powers" and attracting their attention. From the Mayas to the Nazis, this was the magic significance of human sacrifices.

To perform these acts, Himmler organized the S.S., not as a police force, but as a real religious order with a regular hierarchy ranging from the lay brother to the Father Superior. Some of the highest ranking officials were members of two organizations who were never officially recognized: The Ahnenerbe Society and the "Black Order" of the Lords of Thule.

Death Camp Psychic of

This is the front gate of the concentration camp at Dachau, Germany. The same iron gate that prisoners walked through from 1932 to 1945 awaits tourists today.

This tortured sculpture is a who died at Dachau. You ma photo; they are spirits who ling

A few months ago while attending summer school in Europe, I jumped into a car with a couple of fellow students and drove from Salzburg, Austria to Dachau, Germany. We were headed for the KONZENTRATIONSLAGER (Concentration Camp)DACHAU which is just outside of Munich. I told my companions that I was going to write an article for Psychic Life Magazine and that once we arrived, I wanted to wander through the camp alone. I explained that I would be looking clairvoyantly at what happened there. They thought I was crazy.

It was hot. I wore a white summer dress and draped the white jacket I brought with me over my head to keep off the strong, glaring sun. There was no shade. There were tall, thin trees along the LAGERSTRASSE (the main road through the camp), but they gave no shade. Now or then. I thought of the prisoners and the heat. I could see them weak from exhaustion and lack of food. Suddenly, I felt that sinking sensation as if something within me was dropping from my heart to my knees. It was. It was me. After a moment, I remembered that I was a trained clairvoyant and psychic healer. I didn't have to become the effect of what had happened here.

Dachau was the first concentration camp built by the Nazis. They claimed it was constructed to protect themselves against the Jews. It was opened in March of 1933. Their suspicion of the Jews, coupled with their fear of them, led to the subsequent opening and operation of 36 other camps strewn throughout central Europe in an attempt to illustrate National-Socialism. The camps soon filled with not only religious, but political enemies of the Reich. By 1941 even criminals were sent to the camp for "disposition". In 1945, all remaining prisoners were liberated.

I wanted to experience Dachau from the beginning as if I were a prisoner arriving there. I walked up to the front gate and stood for a moment outside of it. I could feel the fear and confusion about what would go on inside. From outside the camp, death was not unexpected. I looked up at the closed gates. Inscribed in the iron were the words "ARBEIT MACHT FREI" which means "Work makes one free." I shivered.

I entered the camp and walked across the huge APPELLPLATZ (roll call square). The energy of the platz was thick and white. It was a kind of hopelessness programming energy and was generated en masse. The ground was rocky, filled with various sizes of rocks, making it difficult to walk. I began to generate a lot of effort to get myself across the platz in the blazing heat. I began to think that life in this world was very serious, very hard and probably useless, because after expending much effort to survive here, we eventually die. The programming was working. I stopped, for a moment, to re-define my space in present time. This programming energy was very strong and worked very quickly. Suddenly I knew how all this could have happened.

There was only one barrack left standing after the war. Inside the first room of that barrack, there were wooden beds in single layers and a wooden table. Clairvoyantly, I saw only one person in each bed and that they felt safe and at peace. I thought to myself that I had to be wrong about what I was seeing. I had heard that prisoners were crowded into bunks and terror was rampant.

memorial dedicated to those at the camp.

Just then, a young German girl came in with some American companions and translated the sign written in German just over the door to the room. She said, "This is the infirmary as it looked in 1938 before the camp became crowded." This was a real validation for me as a clairvoyant. I vowed never to doubt myself again.

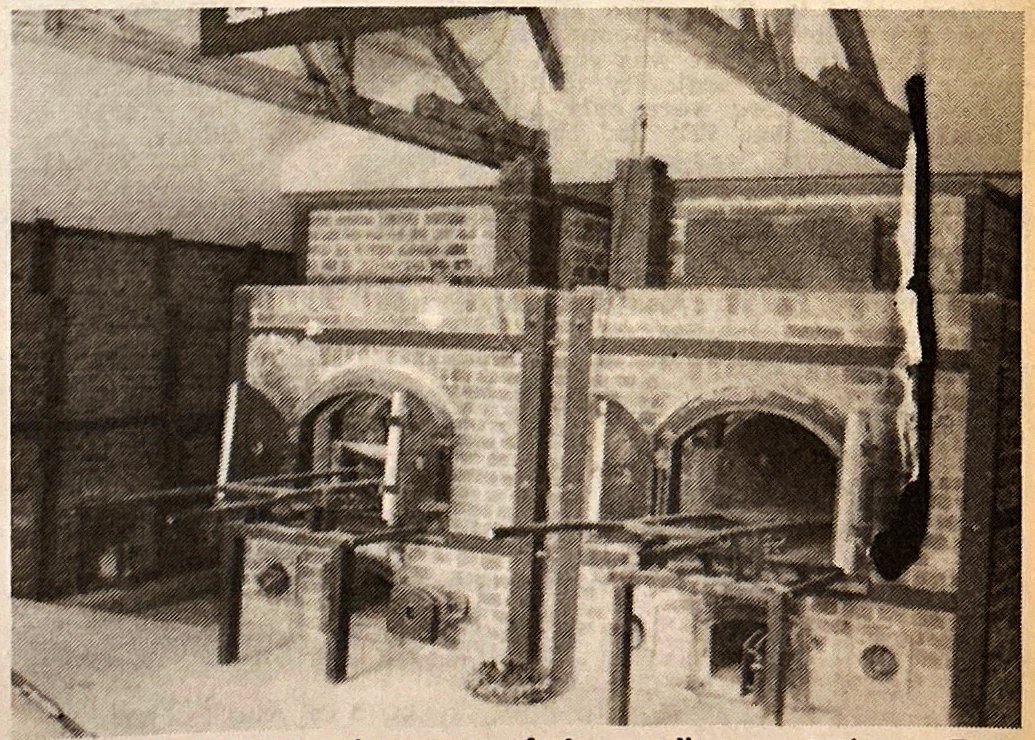
I continued my clairvoyant reading and saw a small, very ill man in a center bed. A spirit was vibrating over his head trying to heal him. That spirit was me. I realized that was why this place seemed so familiar. I was here before as a healer. I saw how I would plug into bodies, or just hang out near a person's body, trying to help these people by removing some of this programming energy. I noticed I used some of my own energy to do it. I realized I was here to get it back.

I was not alone in my attempt to help these people. I remembered that as I walked though the Appellplatz, I could see that every inch was covered with beings. True, some were Nazis overseeing the camps from out of their bodies, that is, actually coming over to the camp as spirit and looking at how things were progressing, but many were spirit guides and healers. I saw that as spirit, the prisoners were usually outside the camp walls looking in. Their bodies were just too painful a place to be. It was their spirit guides and healing guides, who were stronger and fresher spirits, that plugged into the vacant bodies of the prisoners and kept them going. I had to laugh. The Nazis felt the task of destroying the prisoners' spirit was often overwhelming and always very difficult. Perhaps this was why.

I left the infirmary and headed for the KREMATORIUM, also known as Barrack X. This was where the bodies were burned. Specially designed ovens had been built by the Nazis to burn whole bodies at once. The Krematorium was built in the trees outside the walls of the camp. To get to it, one must cross a small bridge. There was a brook running under it, with healthy green trees and shrubbery along its edge. It looked sorely out of place next to the camp. When I crossed, I felt a tremendous change in energy on that bridge. I felt calm. Actually, renewed. I looked to see if the feeling was in past time. It was. It seems that in 1944 the killing was at its peak. Many spirits were completely absorbed with pain, suffering and death. Jesus saw the situation and wanted to heal it. It was a big job. He called in a big-time Maria (guardian spirit) to handle it. He called in his mother, the Virgin Mary.

I saw her come in and dispense pure healing energy from her crown chakra at the top of her head down the creative channel of her left arm and out across the bridge. Her energy was a cleansing for all spirits who crossed that bridge, Nazi and Jew alike. It was completely neutral. She came not to intercede, but to compose.

I went to the small Krematorium first. It was filled with thick black energy, a hate that was so intense it was insane. I saw the energy come from the insane side of the Nazi personalities that thought up the burnings. Surrounding the black energy was a layer of white programming energy which allowed a semblance of order to this destruction rather than to have chaotic killings and open fires.



This photo shows the ovens of the small crematorium. The streak on the right side of the photo is a spirit whose body was cremated.

But this small two-oven crematory was soon unable to meet the need. The prisoners were forced to build a larger one. Inside this one there was much emotional pain. The black and white energy of the small crematory was here also, surrounding the actual ovens, but the energy around the front where the men operated them was thick with sallow yellow competition. It was generated by the oven operators justifying their jobs by believing that some people were worse than others and could be disposed of.

When I came inside, I immediately saw a man working the ovens. It was 1945. He was in a frenzy. He would put a body on an iron cot and shove it into the fire. Then he would bend down and shovel more coal into the fire door just below. Standing back up, he would shake the remains off the cot, pull it out of the oven and pile on another body. He worked fast and furiously.

I began to notice that every time someone came in, they would pause for a moment staring at that oven. They didn't know why, but I did. The man would stop as they came in and try to justify what he was doing. I realized, just then, that he was still here in present time. Still working and still trying to rationalize it. I thought it was strange that a Nazi would even try to explain his actions. I looked carefully at him. He had dark hair and a beard and he looked Polish. He wasn't a Nazi. He said he had to do this or be killed himself. He said he was a prisoner. Later, I found there were such prisoners forced to do work for the Nazis, like burning bodies and removing gold teeth and eyeglasses. They were called "EINSATZKOMMANDOS."

The energy around the outside of the Krematorium was the grey male energy of the Nazi commanders in Berlin who were determined that such a facility must be built. In that energy was a sense of impatience and rigidity. I saw each commander looking through similar invalidation pictures, that is, they were all functioning under the belief that someone else knew better than they what was right. They would then give up their seniority to those people. It looked like there were only a few people whom the Germans felt had the "answers". Hitler, of course, was one of them. The energy was rapidly turning dark blue as the years increased. By 1944, the commanders were having trouble repressing their suspicions that maybe even Hitler didn't have the answers after all.

I wandered back across the bridge and walked back up the Lagerstrasse. I made only two stops on the way out of the camp: the TOTENKAMMER (the morgue block) and Block 26, the so-called PRIESTERBLOCK for arrested clergymen. Neither of the buildings continued to exist. Most were bombed by the end of the war. But the foundations of the building were still in place. So was the energy of the events which took place in them.

The TOTENKAMMER or morgue was always crammed with corpses. According to the files of the International Tracing Service, 31,591 prisoners died in Dachau's concentration camp. A few thousand, unregistered prisoners, were killed by shootings. I stood on the platform of the morgue. It was a difficult thing to do. The energy was as thick as a wall and as solid as I tried to move through it. There was the energy of hundreds of bodies still left there. I felt sick and depressed and in pain. I could see all those bodies piled up, one on top of another. I couldn't stand there very long. I stepped off the block and continued up the Lagerstrasse. There was one last block I wanted to see.

The PRIESTERBLOCK was where the clergy was housed. I stepped up on the block. I saw the men sharing and coping together, but I wasn't surprised that the same battle raged here as elsewhere: the intellectuals or atheists versus those who believe in spirit. Some of the clergymen didn't believe in spirit at all and the competition between them and those clergymen who did was tremendous. There was also competition among the various sects: Catholic, Protestant, and Jew. I could see there was a need to convert each other, as if each of them were somehow invalidated by the others' beliefs. I looked behind me. Jesus stood about 40 feet away. I walked toward him and felt the energy change. He looked sad.

I saw Jesus one last time before I left. He was standing next to the TODESANGST CHRISTI KAPELLE (Catholic memorial) which was built in 1960. I was exhausted. I was filled with grief and other people's pain. I walked up into his aura to get a healing. The energy change was dramatic. It was cooler. I was calmer. I could remember to ground myself, a technique of self-healing, and noticed my space had cleaned out in an instant. I looked up. He was gone. For some reason I looked down at my feet. I saw a flower growing. A flower, amongst all this death. It was a white flower with a yellow center. I thought of the Very Rt. Rev. Dr.

He has taught us that out of death and destruction comes life and creation, and that what is created must eventually be destroyed in order to make room for new creations. There I stood, looking at one groups' mock up or creation for death and holding in my hand evidence of at least a small bit of life that had grown out of it.

I walked slowly up the Lagerstrasse to the exit. My friends took a picture of me there with the guard tower behind me. The guard tower, Jesus and about 52 years of recorded and unrecorded history. Thanks to the Berkeley Psychic Institute and the Church of Divine Man, I saw it all. ☆

Himmler's organization did not count on the fanatical assistance of sadists seeking pleasure in murder. It relied on "New Men," outside the "Inner Circle," consisting of the "Fighting Monks," or "Deaths Head S.S." They had access, according to their rank, to the sacred doctrine and owed allegiance to Thule, the holy of holies. Then there was the ordinary rank and file S.S. man, who was a soul-less machine, a working robot. He was mass-produced, chosen for his "negative" qualities. Here there was no question of doctrine, only of training. The gas ovens of Auschwitz were merely ritual.

The rise of Nazism was one of those moments in the history of our civilization when a door was noisily and ostentatiously opened onto something "other." ☆

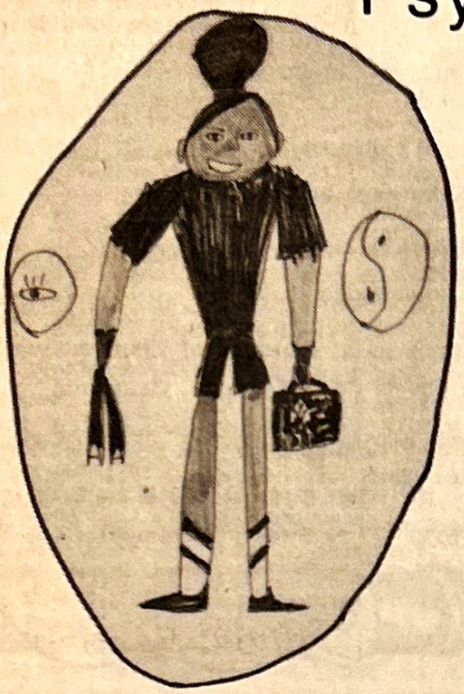
by Mary Bell

Psychic Potty Training



I can own my body

Solomon Age 6

Hello. As a child is born, the being enters the body and begins to accumulate new life experience. Some of the biggest steps take place within the first two years of a child's life. The being is relearning how to operate a body. Let's see now, I've gotten up on all fours and voila - crawling begins. What a milestone. Beings enjoy learning how to operate a body. The next big step begins when a child starts to walk. Look out world here I come. Everything that was seen from ground level is now subject to close investigation. Children are fascinated by the adult world and the objects within our homes. They closely mimic our adult behavior, from scolding a doll to giving it lots of hugs and kisses.

When a child discovers it can walk and maneuver around, he longs to be left to exploration. The exploration encompasses objects around him and objects within his own universe, i.e. his body. A child masters control of his body as he begins toilet training. This is the final major milestone to a child. Control of the body signifies yet another step towards an adult body.

Congratulations moms, you're losing your baby. How does that feel to you? What emotions come up when your child takes this step? Relief, satisfaction, elation, a tinge of sadness? As children take over the ownership of the body they announce this quite belatedly "I peed." As they gain control this may also feel to you like, I don't need you anymore. It's a joy and a sadness to watch a child begin to own her own path, away separate from her parents. You can almost hear the child say: "Thanks for the body, now where are the car keys?"

A child needs your guidance and experience to help make a smooth transition from diapers to pants. As adults we know "accidents" aren't bad. We don't demand 100% performance, in fact we don't demand performance at all. We can validate a child as he begins to learn about his body, and take control over it. We know toilet training doesn't last forever. It won't be long before he has it together. Children learn much quicker if left to their own ways and means, versus being put on a rigorous schedule.

Here are a few simple steps to making toilet training easier for you and your child:

1) Buy 20 pairs of underwear. This way neither you or your child will feel pressured when accidents happen.

2) Buy large pants or shorts that your child can easily pull on and off in a hurry.

3) Have extra large rubber pants that fit easily over panties for long outings or shopping trips.

4) Carry large baggies or empty bread sacks for wet pants.

5) Keep a supply of wet toilettes for all emergencies.

6) Be amused. Toilet training goes much quicker with no pressure.

Talk about your child's body with him. You will recognize the time to start by his own acknowledgement. "Poops, mom." "Is your peeing?" "You are really learning about your body. Did it tell you it needed to go pee? Good job."

Most children enjoy taking part in the responsibility of their own body. When an accident does happens, let your child help in the cleaning up process. "You went pee on our floor. Good thing we have towels, huh? You are learning; good thing we can make mistakes."

With gentle encouragement children will move easily through diapers to pants. Incorporate pee breaks in your daily schedule. After snacks, lunch, naps, dinner and before bed. "Pee time, would you like to pee now?"

Take a deep breath and watch as your child begins his steps to owning his own body. Be a little amused...it doesn't last forever! ☆

How to Pray

by Rev. Karen Tamura

Spiritual Effort Won't Do It

There is competition that is created between teams in sports and competition that is expressed toward other people in relationships. There is also the personal competition that you have been taught to use against yourself. This competition is used as a control so that you don't create too much too fast. Once this control was put in, the resistance energy generated by you holds it in place. After awhile you accept this programming as a part of your personality because it has lived with you so long.

This competition with one's self is hallmarked by perfect pictures: concepts of who you are or what you are supposed to be doing. The tension created by the dichotomy between "what I am supposed to be" and "what I can actually do" puts you between a proverbial "rock and a hard place." The more spiritual effort that is used to get out from under this rock and hard place, the more the competition energy flourishes.

The natural reaction to this competitive hard place is to start creating dichotomies. Sides are created, good sides and bad sides. This phenomenon is seen in relationships and occurs within yourself if you are in competition in your own private space. This is the good side of me and this is the bad side of me. Whatever parts of you were labeled bad are locked away and every attempt to control them is used. You remove your energy from these parts and place it on "the other side" of wherever you are. For example, if you are on the good side, that bad part of you becomes the enemy or something that is doing it to you. If you are being bad, then that part of you that is "good" becomes disowned because of the sides created from competition. It becomes so great you can't have it. You disown it and so don't recognize it in yourself any more.

There is a great quote in the Bible which says, "A house divided against itself cannot stand." This is what I think it is talking about. A spiritual house. Your house.

When you are divided by competition it is hard to pray or to communicate as yourself to the Supreme Being and to the God of Your Heart. God does hear you, but when you have divided yourself into so many pieces and disowned parts of yourself, your ability to have for yourself is very low.

God is happy with his creations. I know this because He has the power and ability to change them any time he wants to. He has the incredible havingness to create all of this. He has a tremendous havingness for you. If you pray and your havingness for yourself is very low it is hard for you to hear what God is saying to you because His havingness level is so high. The God of Your Heart talks to all parts of you. ☆

Psychic Healing

You Do It Yourself

Four Legged Psychics

"Animals are psychic". This statement has been proved time and again. Often one reads about animals lost hundreds of miles from home, in a place they've never been, and who weeks later return home. Or one hears about animals that sense danger and save lives by warning people of the coming hazard.

Just about anyone who has a pet is aware of the connection between themselves and their animal. There is often an unspoken (telepathic) communication between the species. To a person unaware of energy and psychic abilities these stories and experiences with animals are unexplainable, but to a psychic the answer is obvious. Animals are psychic: they are sensitive to energy connections, telepathic communication, and many of them are also healers.

Eight years ago I heard my first psychic animal story. Apparently my friend Joan had fallen asleep one afternoon and was doing some astral travelling (or dreaming). During astral travelling a silver cord connects you, the spirit, to your physical body. This silver cord allows you to find your way back to your own body instead of someone else's. Joan related that as she began to come back to her body, she panicked and felt as though she couldn't find her way back. At this point her dog, who had been playing in the other room, came running into the bedroom and jumped right onto her stomach where the silver cord connects. Joan was then able to find her way safely back into her body. Since then I have heard and experienced many other similar stories.

One of my favorite stories involves a family that owns a ranch with lots of animals. Linda told me about the time she and her eight year old son, Perry, were trying to feed two horses in a pen. The horses were acting strangely - skittish, stamping their feet, and refusing to eat. Linda finally asked Perry, who is very clairvoyant, if he noticed anything on a psychic level and he replied that the horses were covered with horseflies. Linda couldn't see any horseflies, but Perry explained that they were horseflies without bodies. Linda then remembered that when a horse was covered with horseflies, they would bring him to his pen, wet him down, and kill all the horseflies with a fly swatter. Apparently, on an energy level, the horseflies were still there. Linda's husband, Bud, gave the horses a psychic healing and they calmed down and began eating. After this Perry put a bubble of gold energy around the horses and they were rarely bothered by horseflies (with or without bodies) again.

One problem that animals have being psychic and sensitive to energy is that they can't explain themselves to people who are not consciously aware of the psychic world. Often when I hear someone talking about their animal being restless, making a lot of noise, refusing to eat, or being sick, I see a psychic problem. That dog who won't stop barking even when no one is there may be trying to tell you that there is another spirit or energy force there. Or the cat who always disappears when a certain friend is visiting may be trying to tell you something about the energy of that friend.

As a teacher at the Berkeley Psychic Institute, one of the techniques I teach my students is how to create an energy connection between themselves and the planet. This is called grounding. I also suggest that they try grounding animals. I first learned about this myself when I was getting a psychic healing at an outdoor psychic festival. As the healer was working on my grounding cord, I looked up and saw that from across the field a dog was running toward me. He stopped abruptly, right under my chair, coming to rest in the middle of my grounding cord. As the embarrassed owner came and took her dog away, the healer and I laughed because we knew the dog was attracted to the energy and just wanted a healing, too. Later the owner of the dog came back to tell me that she didn't understand why he had come running up to me. She enjoyed my explanation.

If you are around any animals you might try creating that grounding energy connection between their bodies and the center of the planet, and watch what happens. Don't be surprised if you get a telepathic thank you. Animals are psychic, too.

Lewis Speaks

by Rev. Lewis S. Bostwick

Rules for Spiritual Freedom

I want to talk a little bit about invalidation and havingness. The bounty of earth is great; but only a few people can have it. I find this an amazing phenomenon. One of the reasons for this lack of havingness is that men under the guise of religion created rules and regulations to keep people from gaining their awareness and ability to learn. You can't learn freedom if the rules say you can't dance, or you can't talk with God (that's reserved for holy men), or you can't have an alcoholic drink. Being aware of God in His infinite creation of this planet, and all of the space in this planet, should make one aware that since we are made in His likeness, we should have all of what he created.

We should be able to use the abilities to have, to experience, to take, to leave and to move in and out of our families, our circle of friends, our educational institution and the government levels without fear of being invalidated. By the way, we become invalidated by those who take their rules out of a book. Invalidation through judgement - you blew it because you didn't follow the rules - affects your soul personality in which lies real freedom. Bodies operate on emotion, hunger, fear, apathy, threat of death, threat of happiness, amusement and the highest level: enthusiasm. Now from enthusiasm up to your beingness is where the invalidation takes place. Invalidation drives you out of your creative space.

When you allow the authority figure who goes by the book to drive you out, you become confused. You give up your seniority over your body. Then the bodies around you who are using the greater amount of energy begin to exercise control over you.

Isn't it amazing that the "powers that be" never passed any laws against dying. As I am writing this, one of my good friends decided to change the game and offed the body. All of us psychics were in amusement, but not so her family. Because they are controlled by the book. And by punishment. The only punishment there is, is man-made on this planet. But there is none in the spirit world. So what I'm saying is that not until you gain your full awareness as a being, can you gain havingness in a body. To have and to be mobile in all situations without guilt and intimidation. Money, love, learning, and knowing one's self gives spirit in a body mobility. And cannot be overwhelmed with invalidation. These are the rules.

Have a good day. ☆

Astrology

by Beverly Gallagher

Capricorn Gets His Goat

Sam Davenport is a Capricorn and this is an astrology reading on his sun, moon and ascendant.

Sun: Capricorn

Sam is a responsible person in all areas of his life. He enjoys contributing his practical knowledge for the benefit of others and getting recognition for his many achievements. Active, a strong willed personality and an air of authority and self-confidence make him a capable leader. He uses humor to heal himself and others.

On the other hand, Sam takes himself and others too seriously which can keep him from really letting loose and having a good time. He is inclined to take on too much responsibility and overextend himself in his willingness to help. Sam tends to come on too strong and forces his ideas on others in order to change them for their own good; this causes others to resist him.

Moon: Libra

Sam enjoys being involved in a relationship, but has a strong need to do things his own way. He is warm, affectionate and friendly. He has a strong desire to learn and welcomes new ideas and experiences. Sam likes relating to unusual and interesting people. He is interested in world and community affairs, religion, psychic phenomena, medicine and easily understands human nature. He is very effective working with groups and in teaching others.

At the same time, Sam is a sensitive psychic sponge and can easily become the effect of others' emotions, problems and needs. He is idealistic, tends to overlook others' faults and is then disappointed when they don't live up to his expectations. It is easy for others to take advantage of Sam's willingness to help anyone. Sam's view of the world is strongly colored by emotions, experiences, attitudes and teachings learned during his childhood. This can cause difficulty when relating to others who have different feelings and ideas for he has trouble allowing others to just be themselves.

Ascendant: Sagittarius

Sam is a warm and generous person, very direct, open and honest. He becomes very restless when confined. Personal freedom is very important to him and he needs to direct his own life. Sam enjoys travel, nature and outdoor activities.

In his honesty Sam can be quite tactless in relating to others. He feels conflict and tension in a relationship between his closeness and freedom needs. When pent-up energy is not released Sam can become very irritable; he tends to scatter his energy in many directions and is unable to complete all his projects. ☆

by Runemaster Norris Phillips

X
The Partnership Stone

According to Norse legend, Mankind has been given two gifts by the Gods-Fire and Runes. The first is an aid for the body, to insure comfort and survival. The second, is an aid to guide one towards spiritual freedom. The symbol "X", two lines of equal length intersecting at the midpoint, represents the partnerships created by the spirit to achieve that freedom.

While viewing this symbol, three types of partnerships are presented: Partnership between the Individual and the Supreme Being, between the Spirit Self and the Physical Body, and between the Self and all the other Selves met during a life time. A concept which often places people into a judgement space while viewing these partnerships is called equality. A paradox, yet observable especially amongst those who take Freedom seriously.

The Supreme Being has granted to all humanity total and unlimited freedom. Each soul is allowed the room to create their spiritual path. I would call this unlimited freedom, total loving acceptance. Another way of putting it is to say that what the Self creates or fails to create is not the Supreme Being's problem. I find that many of us have created life experiences where we have allowed others to inform us as to the correct path to the Supreme Being, only to find that we knew the path all along.

The partnership between the Spirit and the Physical Body allows the Self to create life experiences. The gift symbol is one of eight which does not have a reverse. The idea being that there is no opposite of freedom, only degrees of non-freedom. As the Self becomes aware of its creations and motivations, blindness to others and ones own space becomes less. Mixed with amusement the comedy of all life dramas becomes apparent. Spirit and Physical Body can celebrate those delusions which do not allow for mistakes.

Thirdly, the partnership between Selves is represented. Together, all of us inhabit Planet Earth. All of us experience to one degree or another, the fog of guilt and the hopelessness of grief. We can compete with each other and play the game of crime and punishment, or say "hello" to each other and have fun. Sometimes, the best gift one Self can give to another is to allow the other to be who they are without suggesting improvements. Each individual receives their own information or the ability to see truth from falsehood.☆

How Is Your Health?

Hello! I can help you get in touch with your own answers concerning your health and well being in a HEALTH READING. Some things I will look at are:

* What does your body need from you in order to be well?
* Are there past lives affecting your health now?
* Are you using your healing energies? If not, why?

Rev. Christina Stohl, RN has practiced nursing for 7 year with special emphasis in the areas of physiology, nutrition and wellness education. She is a graduate of the Berkeley Psychic Institute clairvoyant and teacher training programs.

From the Runemaster's Mail Bag

Hello, Runemaster:
My question is — How can I be of better service to mankind? I'm on a "service" life time. I feel as if I'm not doing a very good job and mostly I get confused about practicalities like working.

Heather S.

Hello, Heather:
Your casting resulted in the following spread, which I read right to left:

CHANGE

JOY

I see that your are a giver and have a tendency to take on the problems of those around you. When not giving to others you feel uncomfortable with yourself and not worth very much. This energy makes it hard for you to celebrate your uniqueness. I see that you have created this problem for yourself to discover your own information about self-worth. I see energy coming from outside of your space telling you that whatever you do or create is not good enough and for you to try harder. Being creative, you increase your efforts, which keeps the cycle of try harder going. Kind of like being stuck in a bog and using all of your strength to get out only to find yourself sinking in deeper.

The second rune, "growth", informs me that the current growth cycle is an opportunity for you to see how visions of how things ought to be hinders your ability to see how they may need to be left alone. Your feelings of not doing a good job arise from this energy. I understand that tremendous amounts of thought goes into this process, which cuts down on the energy available to create new job situations.

The energy behind the change rune is a suggestion that the answer to your question is to change the question and ask it in the first person tense. "How may I be of service to myself?" I'm aware that you might then be accused of being selfish or self-centered, and that energy comes from outside of your truth. Much of this energy comes from patterns established as a child as you were learning how to keep demands from parents and public school teachers at bay, so you could have your own sense of joy.

A great growth cycle! Victory over old ways doing things is a possibility. Enjoy yourself when you step out of the Bog of Self Doubt and say "the heck with it." ☆

What Color Is Your Aura Today?

ADVERTISEMENT

1st Layer - White. Your father put this protective layer around you to keep you safe.
2nd Layer - Rose. You're thoroughly enjoying your female energy.
3rd Layer - Yellow and Chartreuse. The yellow is your sister's energy. She's very curious about what you're doing and would like to know how it's done.
4th Layer - Clear Blue with Dark Purple. The blue is your affinity for yourself, while the purple is your mother's harsh judgement pictures.
5th Layer - Lavender. Catholic energy that allowed you to use your abilities only as they saw fit. No permission to communicate about certain things.
6th Layer - Green. You see the world as if for the first time as you're using your new psychic tools.
7th Layer - Peach. There's a great deal of healing energy here as you are very capable. Now you're owning your ability to heal yourself as well.

Healing with Tarot

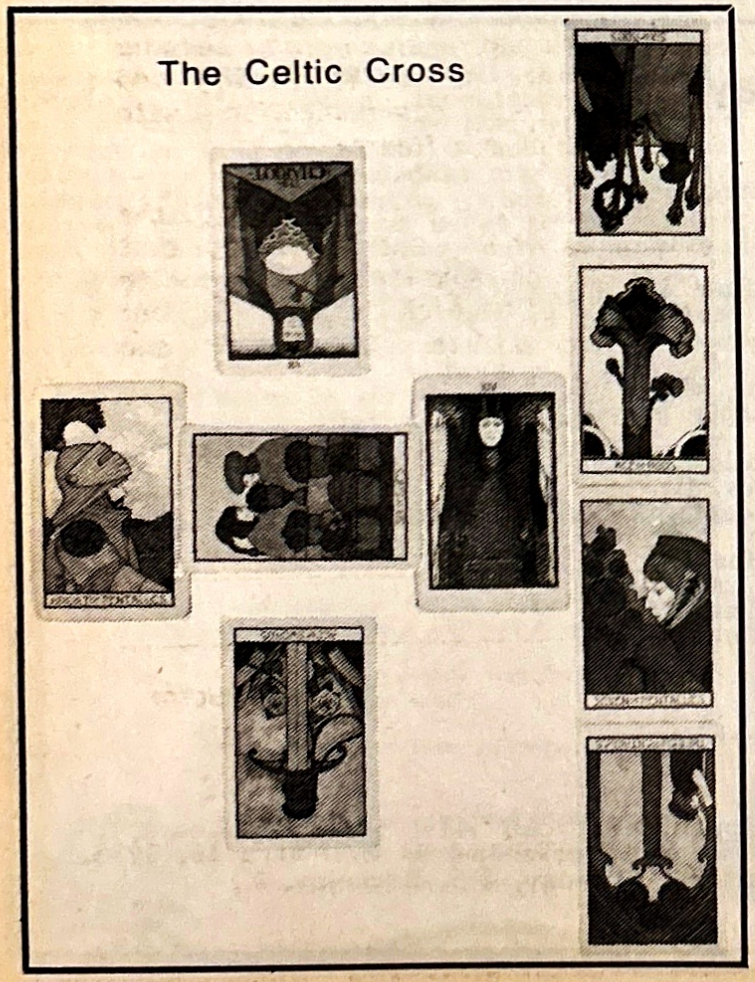
Having Your Cake and Spirituality Too

When spirits communicate they talk with pictures. Pictures are patterns of psychic energy that translate very abstract spiritual information into a simpler form. When we communicate as spirit to ourselves, to others, or to the Supreme Being our message is conveyed with pictures. A spirit with no pictures has no information. A spirit which is trapped in a picture has no growth.

As we experience life we remember events by forming pictures. We often attach an emotion to a picture to emphasize it. Thus when we recall something to our consciousness it is often accompanied by the emotion we put there. If the experience was fun we feel pleasure at recalling it; if it was sad we experience grief; if it was frightful we experience apprehension, and so on. As a spirit you store these pictures in your body, your aura and in the information centers in your body called chakras.

Sometimes pictures are placed in us by others. Striving to attain goals that are never reached, working on problems that don't get solved, confusion about what step should be taken next in your growth, are all indications that someone else has placed a picture in your space and you are running your spiritual energy through it. Occasionally these pictures are very similar to what we would like for ourself. The problem is that in these situations we feel we must choose between two things, usually having to give one up for the other. It is such an instance that is the subject of the following reading.



Nancy McKinney, a recent graduate of the Clairvoyant Training Program of the Berkeley Psychic Institute, asked, "I have been offered a house and a job in Hawaii, but I don't wish to stop my spiritual training. How can I resolve this dilemma?

"Well, Nancy, the card that represents the question you asked is Judgement. It pictures Gabriel blowing his horn to awaken the dead to a new life. He is surrounded by clouds symbolizing the Self surrounded by the substance of appearances. I see this card for you as opportunity, both here and in Hawaii. You are experiencing confusion because you have surrounded your Self with appearances of opportunity. Awakening and renewal await, but first you must find the difference between appearance and reality in your spiritual and worldly growth.

"The card which presents an obstacle to your spiritual renewal is the Six of Cups. This card is often an old acquaintance renewed or it can be the promise of the future. I see this as an old friend who offers you an opportunity for advancement, but sees you through a picture of what you used to be and not as you actually are now. It is represented as the obstacle because you might progress in terms of the world, but your spiritual advancement might be put on hold for awhile.

"The Ace of Swords reversed is the card of the far past. I see it as a time when you gathered information for your future. The reversal represents your friend seeing you at that time. This card is his business view of your intellectual power which is perceived as being great. The Six of Cups is his aspirations on a friendship level. Both cards

CREATIVITY READINGS

What do you want to create for yourself? What are you creating? Is it what you want? New job, more money, your own business, relationships. You can have it your way and change your destiny.

As clairvoyants, we have the ability to read and to heal the energy affecting you and your creations. Very often the creativity channels get filled with energy that is not yours and there is little of your own creative energy to receive what you want.

In a simple one-hour psychic reading and healing, you can receive the information, validation and answers that are keeping you from changing, growing and having. Call for your appointment.

are in past time. You seem to need to look at the difference between your achievements of the past and the validation you get for them, and what you as a spirit need to create for your continued growth.

"The card which is the goal toward which you are working is the Knight of Pentacles. The Knight is sort of a plodder. He is useful and patient. He is also practical. All these decisions you are confronting are all very fast. You are looking to find the most practical solution to your dilemma. You don't want to give up your spiritual growth to advance yourself in the world, but you also want to take the opportunitites that present themselves to you. This goal is working to have both.

"The period of time you are leaving is shown by the Chariot reversed. The Chariot represents the body and the driver, the spirit. The sphinxes are symbolic of the senses. It is how spirit uses thoughts and speech to control the body. Here it is reversed and means to me that you are moving from a period of time where you have been influenced by others' thoughts about what you should be. In a way it is moving from the influence of the Ace of Swords, or validation from others, and by using your spiritual abilities finding what is essential for your own growth.

"The period of time you are entering is symbolized by Temperance. I see this as the time when you will combine seemingly opposite spheres of the spirit and the world into harmony. It will be a practical turn of events which will enable you to put into practice what you have learned.

"Your position in the reading is seen as the Three of Pentacles, reversed. This is a card which represents commission to work. I see this as you viewing yourself in the position of the job which has been offered to you. This is why it is reversed. You have not accepted the job yet, but in a way you are looking from the space as though you had to see how it is going. You are looking through the picture that has been placed in front of your sixth chakra to see if it fits.

"The environment is symbolized by the Seven of Pentacles. This is a card of waiting. The man has planted and is tending his crop, but it is not time for harvest yet and so there is nothing to do but wait. This is apathy in your space and it is reflective of why you are seeking a change.

"The place of hopes and fears is the Ace of Wands. I see this as a hope for you. It is a card of great energy in growth, especially on a spiritual level. It is akin to the step you are in as shown in Temperance. There is a note of skepticism involved here in that you think you don't have the energy or the one piece of information necessary to make your change and that is why the Ace is a hope.

"The outcome of this reading is represented by the Six of Wands reversed. It is a card of victory over obstacles. Being reversed, I see this as other people encouraging you to follow their ideas of what they think you should do. This does not have a lot to do with your spiritual or worldly growth. It has more to do with their controlling interest in your decision. I see you as attaining a space of neutrality and finding the path which allows you to not have to make choices which eliminate one of the two things you wish to have for yourself." ☆

Psychics & Media

Being Tried in the Press

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." (John 1:1)

Then came the media.

"How you have felt, O men of Athens, at hearing the speeches of my accusers, I cannot tell; but I know that their persuasive words almost made me forget who I was: -- such was the effect of them; and yet they have hardly spoken a word of truth." (Socrates at his trial in Plato's Apology.)

The Word was God, but the media has the front page. How did this happen? Somehow, the freedom of the press which came into being as a necessary corollary to the freedom of religion was slowly used by the increasingly atheistic press to override not only the freedom of religion but many other civil rights guaranteed to citizens by our constitution, including the right to a trial by our peers.

"Let us consider, my Lords, that arbitrary power has seldom or never been introduced into any country at once. It must be introduced by slow degrees, and as it were step by step, lest the people should see its approach. The barriers and fences of the people's liberty must be plucked up one by one, and some plausible pretenses must be found for removing or hoodwinking, one after another, those sentries who are posted by the constitution of a free country for warning the people of their danger."

Thomas Lord Erskine said this in his defense of Thomas Paine in 1792. Paine was being tried for his use of the press to publish his beliefs about what rights man has in relationship to the Creator and to the government.

Freedom of the press was seen in the original Virginia Bill of Rights of 1776 as "...one of the great bulwarks of liberty, and can never be restrained but by despotick (sic) governments."

The Bill of Rights also states: "That in controversies respecting property, and in suits between man and man, the ancient trial by jury is preferable to any other, and ought to be held sacred."

Yet, what has happened? The media has not only replaced God and the Word, it has replaced our constitution and judicial system. It has become the authority, prosecutor, jury and judge. Does the freedom of the press really give them this right? Absolutely not!

There is a case waiting to be heard in the San Jose Municipal Court concerning a healer who was arrested for "practicing medicine without a license". More technically, she is charged with violating California Business and Professions Code 21.

Already the media has picked it up, tried it, and judged this healer under the guise of letting all interested parties have a say so in its article. For example, one article quotes the deputy district attorney in charge of prosecuting the case giving his verdict that she is a snake oil salesman and what she does is nothing but marlarkey, which the gullible public has to be protected from. The newspaper also undermines the seriousness of this charge by the prosecutor, and what it has already done to her livelihood and pursuit of happiness, not to mention her civil rights, by giving her equal time. What they chose to print in her defense was that the only crime she had committed before was getting crawdads without a permit. There is an evident slant to be found even in this fact, which they chose to find relevant. Even in her defense they accentuated what they knew would make her sound peculiar and just a little more sensational.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."

In this very strong statement from our Declaration of Independence I find the basis of the definition of civil rights as protected in our Constitution. Our forefathers fought to abolish forms of government that deprive us of our "unalienable rights". However, healers and psychics such as the one being tried in San Jose and many others like her in increasing numbers, are having their civil rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness stripped away from them, not only by the jealous god AMA and its police force, the government medical boards (Board of Medical Quality Assurance in California), but also by the media. The media is by no stretch of the imagination sympathetic to the AMA. It is only sympathetic to itself and what contributes to its own treasury. At this time the media enjoys getting on the bandwagon to prey on healers and psychics. After all, without clairvoyants and healers, maybe the media can become the god it believes itself to be.

Today, I don't really have any answers, but I do have some questions. Every time a healer or a psychic is arrested, it really is a constitutional issue, but how do you handle it in a local court? Or in a public hearing? Unfortunate as it may be, local courts and local government agencies don't normally operate according to the Constitution, but by their own handbook of rules and regulations. To prove them wrong you need lots of money, easily of $25,000-$50,000 to get to the Supreme Court. Even then, who knows if you'll ever get there in time, or at all?

The government depriving a healer or a psychic of his rights is a civil rights issue, as well. That should not be tried in a local court either. Also, what happens to the healer or psychic who gets tried but the case is somehow dropped after he has already lost his livelihood or happiness? How does the healer go after those bureaucratic tyrants who had a hand in taking it away from him?

Do you know? Or do you have some thoughts on this? Feel free to write to me, care of Healing and the Law, Psychic Life Magazine, 1339 Lincoln Ave, San Rafael, CA 94901. Have a great day!

Licensing Spirit?

On August 15, 1985 the California State Supreme Court struck down a law which made it illegal to practice clairvoyance, spiritual reading or other similar businesses or arts. The case concerned an Azusa Municipal Code Ordinance and should apply to many similar ordinances found in California. It was challenged by Fatima Stevens, an ordained minister in the Spiritual Psychic Science Church of Truth, a church which believes in palm or card reading.

By a 6 to 1 vote, the Court rejected the argument by Los Angeles County that fortune telling is "inherently deceptive". The Court ruled that such communications are protected by the freedom of speech provisions of the California Constitution. The Court did not address the question of whether the law violated the freedom of religion clause. Since Ms. Stevens is a minister, and was practicing her religious beliefs, it would seem that she was entitled to that protection as well.

The trouble with basing the decision only on freedom of speech is that speech is subject to regulation by the state while religion is not. It is constitutional to tell you where you may speak and when you may speak and to charge you in the form of fees, taxes or licenses. Some counties and cities charge a yearly licensing fee of $400-$600 to be psychic. Some require you to post a bond of $1,000. It is disturbing that the state still has the power under this decision to place a financial burden on being psychic.

The lone dissenter, Justice Malcolm Lucas, didn't feel the ordinance violated freedom of speech. He stated that Azusa had a right to "protect its citizens from their own gullibility." The state criminal law banning fraudulent fortune telling operates only after the fact and therefore "would be of little solace to an Azusa widow bilked of her life savings by a necromancer or a crystal-gazer who had the 'foresight' to leave early," he said.

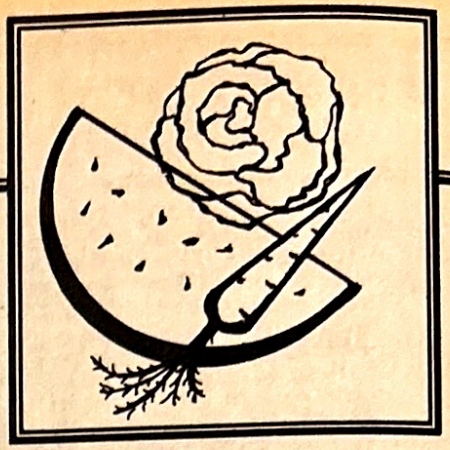
Food for Psychics



by Cathy Langlois

Talking With Your Body Through Herbs

It was very soothing to me to watch my friend sift through her various pungent jars and bags of herbs as she created the mixture she felt would help ease the stomach pains I was having. It seemed that the entire room became warmer and very calm as my friend closed her eyes and deeply inhaled the scent of the herbs. She crushed them between her fingers and placed the mixture in a wooden and wicker tea strainer. I never really knew what exactly she used but after I drank the tea, I fell asleep within a half hour and the pains were gone when I woke up.

The most common experiences most people have with herbs is in everyday cooking or making an aromatic pot of tea on a rainy night. But herbs have been used to heal for a long time. Guidelines for using herbs for health were mentioned in the Bible... "there will grow all kinds of trees for food...their fruit will be for food and their leaves for healing." -Ezekiel 47:12. Herbal healing is common to most native cultures. Edgar Cayce, a psychic who gave many health readings, prescribed herbal remedies for many ailments.

When you are ready to experiment, buy a modern herbal handbook. Then take yourself on a field trip to a health food store that will let you at least smell the herbs. Most are inexpensive so you could start by buying small quantities to play with. Pick an undisturbed time to just set them in front of you on a table. At random choose one and smell it. Is it disgusting or pleasing? Remember some of the strongest medicinal herbs can smell pretty bad. If it is in the form of leaves, crush some and feel the herb, maybe touch some to your tongue. This immediately puts you more in touch with your senses and therefore your body, already a good start to healing yourself. One thing you should remember--you are the ultimate judge for what you want to use.

I learned that in a rather difficult lesson not that long ago. I had a bad case of poison oak and took the well intentioned advice of someone who knew all about herbs. Once I'd made the capsules she told me to take, I knew I was in trouble; they practically made me gag. I knew all about how bad tasting some "good" herbs can be, and because I was getting desperate for a cure, ignored the screams I was getting from by body. After a few dosages of these capsules, I was not only itching but I was sick as a dog. I got over it, but the poison oak was worse than ever. I finally found a remedy that worked for me but the point is, I didn't listen to the communication I was getting from my own body. I let someone else's expertise drown out that voice.

What can you expect to gain by learning to use herbs? Well, ask yourself what you want... a soothing warm tea, something to cleanse you, a healing for an ailment? Whatever your reasons, let yourself enjoy exploring this method of giving to your body through herbal knowledge. ☆

Movie Review

"Desperately Seeking Susan" is a fun movie. Full of enthusiasm and playfulness, the movie seems to advocate the freedom to be found by breaking down the boundaries that we create in our lives.

Susan, the title character, is a punk/new waver from New York City, aptly played by boy-toy rocker Madonna. Rosanna Arquette plays a young, bored New Jersey housewife, Roberta, who follows the long distance relationship of Susan and her boyfriend, Jimmy (Robert Joy), as they play it out in the personals column of a newspaper. Hoping to vicariously add some spark to her own life, Arquette decides to attend one of their rendezvous, advertised in the paper.

From there, Arquette gets swept into a counter-culture world of artists and musicians that she quickly learns to prefer over her stifled yuppie existence. A hit on the head, a case of amnesia, a mistaken identity, and the mousey housewife steps right into the role of a rebellious, new wave vamp.

The story line is filled with bizarre characters in off-the-wall settings under continually convoluting circumstances. The author (Leora Barish) and the director (Susan Seidelman) do a good job of making it all work. Watching this movie is almost like playing a well planned game of treasure hunt, with every clue leading you to more confusing and yet more enticing adventures.

For example, Susan's boyfriend sends his best friend, Desi, to keep a mysterious rendezvous with Susan. Desi (played by Aidan Quinn) takes the amnesiac Arquette under his wing, thinking that she is Susan. Meanwhile, Arquette is pursued through her new life by a psychopathic thug who wants the Egyptian earrings that Susan stole from her last lover, a New Jersey mobster.

Susan herself, having missed the rendezvous through a twisted series of events, ends up staying at the home of Arquette's husband, Gary. Here she hides out from the mobsters while helping Gary find Roberta in the counter-culture Susan knows so well.

Confused? Good! Because half the fun of the movie is the chaos that results from this weird blend of characters interacting in and out of their respective elements on their amazingly coalescing paths of destiny. Each character is thrown up in the air like a cat, and with greater and lesser degrees of aplomb, most of them end up somewhere near their feet.

Arquette's character is presented as having shed the shackles of conventionality and the living out of someone else's dreams in favor of her own creativity and enthusiastic freedom. As a clairvoyant I saw Arquette simply adopt another person's aura, becoming not her own person but a replica of someone she admired. It is significant that the main people involved in this film, including the producers, Sarah Pillsbury and Midge Sanford, were mostly women. I see that they were trying to show how one woman could be a positive role model for another woman. But as a spirit there is no freedom in trying to use someone else's information to run your life regardless of whether that other person is a male or a female. It bothered me that no one seemed to notice that Arquette had simply found a new teacher, a new leader, not her own freedom. But then, I guess you can't have everything. (Or can you?!)

Book Review

The last issue of This Is Your Psychic Life Magazine (Vol. 5 No. 6) covered the work of Richard Gordon, a San Francisco Bay Area healer who specializes in body alignment. Following is a review of his book on this subject, "Your Healing Hands - The Polarity Experience"... editor.

The author has written what he terms an introductory piece on polarity energy balancing. The polarity system is described as a holistic approach to healing which uses the life-force currents that flow through the healer's hands to release blocked energy in another person's body. Blocked energy, he feels, is what causes pain in the body and by using the simple techniques he has developed pain can be dissipated or completely eliminated. It is a method of restoring the body's natural life-force energy. Many of the techniques described in the book are based on the ancient Spagyric art of healing which utilizes the subtle electromagnetic fields of the body. The body has magnetic poles just like the earth and the sun, Gordon believes. The various techniques and positions illustrated in the book combine acupressure and massage along with information about which body parts have positive and negative magnetic charges. These combinations are used to balance the energy in the body.

It's interesting that Gordon gives a great deal of credence to the body's ability to heal itself. There is, however, no mention at all of the spirit's ability to heal the body, or even that it is the spirit that controls the body. When I look at Gordon as a being, I see that he heals from above, just behind his body. From this place he seems to marvel at all the abilities of his body. Although he uses a lot of his own spiritual healing information and abilities, he seems to believe that these are all a part of the body's remarkable intelligence.

As a psychic, I found the book to be very validating because I know that I can use those same abilities as a spirit in my body. Many of the techniques are extremely relaxing and do serve to unblock the body's energy channels. This book does contain a lot of good information that can be very effectively utilized for performing healings.

However, since Gordon developed the techniques taught in the book from his own personal spiritual information, I found that at times I needed to adapt the healing information to suit my own. For example, while trying some of the methods, I noticed a tendency for one of the spirits that Gordon uses as a healing guide to come into my own aura. Once I communicated to this being that I wasn't in agreement with this, it was no longer a problem.

Obviously it was very difficult to attempt to teach something like spiritual healing through a book. Gordon does a good job of breaking down his techniques into understandable sets of instructions. It helps if you can be aware of yourself as a spirit and your own healing abilities while following his instructions, though. Gordon has much valuable information to impart, but your own information is, of course, wherever you find it and can use it.

"The young girl is clutching a purse that looks like it belonged to her mother. While play-acting at being a grown up, the youngster has brought another being into her body. This spirit has told the girl that it can help her carry off her adult valance because it has more information than the child does. However, bringing that spirit's information into her body has made the girl look evil or a little crazy. The spirit is actually one who knew the mother in a past life and has come into the girl's body in order to compete with the mother. The spirit is still stuck in the game of female competition.
